A Balanced Head

The Red lines should all be parallel.

The Blue lines should be the same length. If not in a young pup, they will continue to grow with the same percentage of difference and unbalanced.

The green line should run directly in the middle of the line under the nose. It should be dead center on the chin. If not in a young pup, it will create a wry mouth.

This is Ellie Linderholm drawing of a boxer head. It was the most perfect drawing I could find to illustrate a Balanced Head.

Per diagram on page 1 - Green & blue lines are off.

Same bitch as page 2 closeup.

This dog got worse and has trouble eating as an adult.

Pups are both female 3-4 weeks. Pup on left is not related to pup on right. Look at the size and placement of the eyes. The pup on the left is good. The pup on the right seems OK with the green line, but the blue lines do not match. This pup grew up with a wry face.
